

THE CALEB DAUGHERTY BAND

Quotes

“We had never heard of The Caleb Daugherty Band before the MACC (2019) and after hearing him for the first time we became fans for life! Caleb sings straight from the heart and has a voice as big as an Indiana cornfield”

—Kenny & Amanda Smith

“I think The Caleb Daugherty Band is one of the best new groups to come along in quite some time. The band perfectly blends the sounds of bluegrass and traditional country music much in the style of J.D. Crowe & The New South and Caleb has a voice reminiscent of the late Keith Whitley. As a matter of fact, if J.D. Crowe was still performing, Caleb Daugherty would likely be his lead singer and guitar player! The band really impresses me because they work together well on stage and in the studio and they really complement each other. Do yourself a favor and make sure you go to see The Caleb Daugherty Band the first chance you get.”

—Danny Roberts of The Grascals

“Despite the fact he’s still a few years away from turning the big 3-0, Caleb Daugherty comes across with a genuinely knowing perspective. With an instrumental ensemble that makes good use of banjos, mandolins and fiddles, Daugherty touts the divide between classic country and vintage bluegrass. In an era where posturing and pretence is all too prevalent, Caleb Daugherty represents the real deal, an artist whose efforts exude a confidence and clarity that extend well beyond his tender years.”

—Lee Zimmerman - Bluegrass Today

“Caleb Daugherty is one of the brightest young voices I have heard in bluegrass music in many years. I wasn’t alive when Keith Whitley was a member of J.D. Crowe & The New South, but I have to imagine it would illicit emotions that are eerily similar to those I get seeing The Caleb Daugherty Band. Based off the visible reactions to the band’s sound that I see from not only festival audiences but from veteran musicians and headlining artists, I know that I’m not alone in that assumption. Caleb’s smooth voice and the band’s tight musicianship allow them to make any song their own. They are seamlessly blending their passions for classic country and traditional bluegrass, as well as anyone on the bluegrass circuit today.”

—Daniel Mullins - Real Roots Radio

“Caleb is one of the most gifted young singers out there today. Can't wait for everyone to hear his new CD.”

—Rickey Wasson
